CAUSES OF THE GENDER PAY GAP

At British Airways Holidays, women are well represented throughout our business, including at our most senior levels. However, as well as being very well represented at senior levels (61% of our highest paid colleagues are women), women also occupy a very high proportion of our non-managerial (for example customer and administrative) roles. The high proportion of women in these roles (92%) is the key cause of our gender pay gap.

We are confident that men and women doing comparable work are paid fairly and equally. At British Airways Holidays, all recruitment, pay and progression decisions are made based on merit and are not influenced by gender.

We promote a healthy work-life balance and have policies in place supporting flexible working hours and working from home. We believe this helps attract people to our organisation and supports colleagues to progress into more senior roles. As a result of our flexible working policy, 29% of our colleagues are employed in part-time roles, including senior level managers.

CAUSES OF THE BONUS PAY GAP

British Airways Holidays' bonus is calculated as a percentage of an individual's salary, so the bonus pay gap is reflective of the hourly pay gap. The bonus pay gap calculation is based on actual bonuses received. As fewer hours are worked, colleagues working part-time will receive a lower bonus than their full-time equivalents. 35% of our female colleagues work part-time which therefore impacts the bonus pay gap.

In the period being reported, 90% of men and 81% of women received a bonus. The colleagues who did not receive a bonus were new joiners to British Airways Holidays and so did not meet the eligibility criteria of the scheme.

PAY QUANTILES

Given that just over 70% of colleagues at British Airways Holidays are women, the gender distribution across the four equally sized pay quartiles shows that women are well represented at every level of our business. The figures suggest however that there is an over-representation of women in the lowest pay quartile which drives the difference in pay between men and women.

HOW WE ARE ADDRESSING THESE DIFFERENCES

We are committed to tackling gender imbalance and to building a diverse and inclusive workforce.

We have family friendly policies in place and implemented enhancements to these in 2022. Our wellbeing programme includes a working group specifically focused on providing menopause support. We promote a healthy work-life balance and colleagues at all levels make use of our flexible working policy which enables colleagues to flex their start, break and finish times. During 2022 we successfully completed a trial of our hybrid working approach which enables colleagues to balance working with colleagues in the office and working from home. This helps us to attract and retain both male and female employees at all levels of the organisation.

The British Airways Holidays leadership team consists of 55% women.

We aim to attract people of all backgrounds to British Airways Holidays and to support all our colleagues in developing and progressing through the business. We believe the above are important steps towards achieving this and, with the support of our Diversity and Inclusion working group, we will continue to challenge ourselves and consider how we can do more.
